Third Floor Tidbits

Currently on display in Weigel -

Steven Ehrlich, 2014-2015 Regnier Chair - Steven Ehrlich has recently spent time again with Professor Baudoin's studio in Seaton. Architecture Department Head Matt Knox stated, "Ehrlich has evolved a signature design philosophy called Multicultural Modernism, which seeks to create sustainable buildings infused with cultural meaning and rooted in the specifications of site and latest technologies." Check out his work in the numerous resources on display.

2015 CELA Conference - March 24-March 28 - K-State - Incite CHANGE | CHANGE Insight

When we teach, design and serve, we incite change. When we observe change, it informs our insight; deepening understanding and broadening application of acts, processes, representations and the results of creating difference. How do you incite change? How do you change insight?

Top Ten Planning Books of 2015 - PLANETIZEN has released its annual list of the 10 best books for 2015 in Urban Planning, Design and Development and you have access to all 10! Do you agree with their selections?

Michael Graves (1934-2015) - From the Portland Building to the tea kettle, Michael Graves was clearly an artist. A prolific architect, Graves also had success as an industrial designer, producing products for companies such as Target and Black & Decker. Books and periodicals highlighting his career serve as "Resources of the Week" in Weigel.

I don't remember the title, but I know it was orange... You can't miss this display!

An additional library service for you -
