Interior architecture & product design professor named to Nuckolls Fund board of directors

The College of Architecture, Planning & Design's Katherine Ankerson, professor and head of the interior architecture & product design department, has been named to the board of directors for the Nuckolls Fund for Lighting Education.

The fund was established in 1988 in memory of lighting designer and educator Jim Nuckolls to support college-level lighting programs. Nuckolls was known for his special ability to inspire interest in, and commitment to, the field of architectural lighting design. The purpose of the Nuckolls Fund for Lighting Education is to enable programs that allow students to learn, appreciate and apply the basics of lighting and design.

The fund's board is made up of 12 individuals from across the country, including two educators - one of which is Ankerson - with lighting design experience and 10 professionals in the lighting industry.

Ankerson first participated with Nuckolls Lighting Fund as a grant recipient. During 2013, she and nine colleagues from three different universities were awarded the 2013 IDEC Media Award for their project "Lighting Across the (Design) Curriculum." The two-year project was the result of a $50,000 grant, awarded in 2010 as part of the 20th anniversary of the Nuckolls Lighting Fund. Ankerson presented the group's final project in 2013 at the LightFair event in Philadelphia.

Magyar appointed to Spiritual Places Committee of International Union of Architects

Dr. Peter Magyar has been appointed to the Spiritual Places Committee of the International Union of Architects (UIA). Dr. Magyar is a professor of architecture in the College of Architecture, Planning & Design at Kansas State University.

The UIA is a global organization of architects with a mission to "unite architects of the world without any form of discrimination," quote from uia.org. The union includes members from 124 countries and territories and represents nearly 1.3 million architects from around the world. The Association of Hungarian Architects nominated Dr. Peter Magyar for this most prestigious appointment.

The charge of the UIA's Spiritual Places Committee is "to reveal the essence, methodology and variety of architectural conversions and reconversions, today and in the past, to develop a table for interpreting the meaning of a building for all religions, and to understand past as well as future possibilities for architecture, religion and the human spiritual conditions." Dr. Magyar, in his inaugural speech to the Szechenyi Academy of Arts and Letters, in May 2015 emphasized that perceiving architecture, as roots of infinity, could lend spiritual connotations to others facets, than only religious places.

"It is fitting that Professor Magyar assumes a position on this committee given his long-running research into the spiritual underpinnings of human kinds architectural creations." said Timothy de Noble, dean and professor in the college of architecture, planning & design.

No more catalog - Now Search It!

K-State Libraries recently moved to a new library system. Instead of accessing resources through the catalog, these items will now be retrieved through Search It, a cloud-based discovery tool.

"Search It is a one-stop search tool, simultaneously searching physical and online collections," K-State Libraries Dean Lori Goetsch said. "This is truly a next-generation library system. Results include both full text and citation records for millions of journal articles and electronic books."

Learning on your own Visit <http://guides.lib.k-state.edu/searchit>, the Search It research guide for information and tips.

Librarian led training - Mark your calendar now!

Search It allows researchers to access both K-State Libraries' holdings plus a vast number of articles, eBooks and more. Search It replaces the existing catalog interface. No registration is necessary - come and participate in this hands-on training.

Monday, August 17, 11:00 am - 12:00 noon | 407 Hale Library

Wednesday, August 19, 1:00 - 2:00 pm | 407 Hale Library

In addition to the trainings, librarians are always available by appointment to provide demonstrations or to answer questions.

The Ask a Librarian service is another way to receive Search It assistance.

Search It will be continually customized and improved based on patron needs.

Due to K-State Libraries' upgrade to Alma, the new library system, the "New Resources" link once found on the Weigel Library website is no longer there. However, even though the link isn't available, the New Resources shelf is still in the Library.

The number of books on the July New Resources shelf is fewer than usual due to the move to Alma. But once the new library program checks out and is fully operational, new books and media will arrive again.

Come up and browse acquisitions from the last few months. There's something for each APDesign discipline.
