arch_weekly note

First of all, I want to give everyone, students and faculty, a big round of applause for showing off some truly inspiring work last week. Awesome. I didn't make it to all of the reviews unfortunately, but one thing that really made my week was seeing all the guest reviewers in attendance. I saw a great showing of alumni, new faces and some of the top dogs in many regional firms. Knowing they saw first hand the work you do makes me very happy.

I wish all of you the very best of success on your final exams this week, safe travels home and Holiday season filled with joy.

See you in 2015.

arch_design studio

Greetings From Second-Year-Studio-Land

We made it! Over the past semester, we completed three exercises. The first of these isolated the fundamental components of architectural design: space, use, and intention. In the second we focused on precedent and sustainability. Finally, in the third exercise we were challenged to explore the influence of site and tectonics on the design process.

Now, after a bit of rest, and hopefully some home cooking we will be ready to go on. We will be anxious to take on other issues, and larger and more complex challenges.

arch_winners

Congratulations to fourth year student Lanting Su for winning the third annual Manko Design Competition for her Crossroads Brewery project! The student work presented at the competition on Friday, December 12th, was of exquisite quality and the jury had a difficult time choosing just one winner.
