Workshop Friday, September 22nd at 10:00 am Location TBD

Experience / Vision / Construction

An Essential Extract from the Practice of Architecture

Abstract:

How do you form and fix an image in your mind? How do you investigate and develop an image? How do mental images and physical experiences interrelate? How do the acts of drawing and making reinforce imagination? How do you get others to see what only you have seen in your mind? How do you get your imagination built?

These are not hypotheticals. They are questions right at the center of architectural competence. In this workshop we will strip away all of the aesthetics and contextual complications associated with design and get right down to practical imagination and visual communication.

Participants will each experience a unique idea, something neither deniable nor obvious. They will develop their perception of that idea, practicing attention and visualization. Then, they will see just how well they can get that idea into another's head and out into the physical world.

Students must come prepared with:

- * A drawing pad and pen/ pencil
- * A small cutting mat
- * An exacto or olfa type knife
- * A straight edge for cutting
- * Masking tape.

Interested students and faculty can sign-up in the Department of Architecture office (Seaton 1088) by 1:30 pm on Wednesday. Workshop will take 2 hours. Number of participants is limited.
