Greetings from week 3. It is great to see APDWest buzzing with activity again. At every year level there are some very exciting design projects in progress and I look forward to seeing them evolve. While there is a lot of energy out west, here in Seaton Hall, other than construction noises, it is pretty quite. As such I have a favor to ask. As you know, first year students are working hard up on the third floor of Seaton Hall West. I want you to think back a few years and remember how encouraging it was to talk to those "awe inspiring" upper level students, see their work and use it as inspiration. Well, due to our temporary displacement, first year students don't have easy access to see the amazing things they will be accomplishing in a few years. My favor is that next time you are in Seaton Hall, take a few minutes to visit with first year students, ask them about their projects or invite them to come and visit you in your studio. Share your passion for architecture with them and make their day. Thank you in advance.

Have a great week.

Best,
Matthew Knox, AIA
Professor and Head

DEAN DE NOBLE RECEIVES SELECT HONOR FOR HIS ADVOCACY OF ARCHITECTURE

Dean Tim de Noble has been recognized regionally for his contributions to promoting the profession of architecture. The board of directors of the American Institute of Architects Kansas City recently named Tim de Noble its 2016 Architecture Advocate of the Year

In recognizing de Noble, the board cited his efforts to elevate APDesign and the architecture profession at the university and state levels since becoming dean in 2009. The board also recognized de Noble's role in assisting the university with its new campus master plan and with the many building projects on campus in the last few years.

"I am very proud to be recognized for merely doing what I believe in and am passionate about," de Noble said. "Design matters is my message and I try not to miss an opportunity to deliver it."
