Landscape Architecture and Regional & Community Planning Monday Memo 09.19.16

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Internship reports begin tomorrow at 11:30 am in Seaton 306. All faculty and students are welcome. The full schedule of reports is available here.

In support of President Obama highlighting the important role of schools in training and inspiring students who will lead the planning, design, and development of future homes, buildings and infrastructure to design and build for resilience, Stephanie Rolley signed the Educators Commitment on Resilient Design Statement, prepared by the White House, on behalf of the Department of Landscape Architecture and Regional & Community Planning:

We envision a future where our homes, schools, workplaces, and communities are resilient to extreme weather events and can adapt to the impacts of climate change. Making this future a reality will require a focus on resilient design across disciplines. Students who will lead the planning, design, engineering, development, construction, and retrofit of homes, buildings, and infrastructure must be prepared to build for resilience, both now and into the foreseeable future. We commit to:

- Inspiring and training the next generation of architecture, engineering, urban planning, and construction professionals to innovate and effectively address resilience to extreme weather events and climate change;
